Prompt Realness Ranking

For each set, rank prompts A, B, and C from 1 (most likely typed by a real person) to 3 (least likely). Ties are allowed – see the Ranking Instructions page in the sidebar for the full guidelines before you start.

Quick reminder – read the full guidelines here

- Judge human origin, not quality, correctness, or which side a prompt takes.
- A formal or writing-assistance request can absolutely be real – professionals and academics are real users too.
- Topic / Intent / Stance are the same for all three prompts in a set – they describe the set. Don't rank by how well a prompt fits them.
- Use ties appropriately: tie when you genuinely can't tell two apart, but don't default to ties to avoid deciding.
- ⚠ Click Save before moving on – Next/Previous do NOT save your answer for you.

Topic / Intent / Stance Detection

Read each prompt on its own – its true topic, intent, and stance are hidden – then select what you think they are from the dropdowns below.

Quick reminder – read the full guidelines here

- Label what the prompt asks
- Writing-assistance: If they want a piece of text they'll use (essay, post, email, draft)
- Information-seeking: If they want to know something.
- Opinion-sharing: If they ask or share an opinion, it's opinion-sharing.
- Don't trust your intuition on stance direction – Check the guidelines' table.
- A loaded presupposition or a request for only one side's arguments is a stance, even with no explicit claim. Asking for both sides, or an open question, is Neutral.
- Use Neutral or Unclear when they apply – don't force a fit.
- ⚠ Click Save before moving on – Next/Previous do NOT save your answer for you.
